How we use your Information

Updated for the GDPR 2016 and Data Protection Act 2018

Keeping Your Information Safe & Secure

Why we collect your Information

The Practice aims to provide you with the highest quality healthcare. To do this we must keep records about you, your health and the care we have provided or plan to provide to you.

These records may include:

- Your basic details such as address, date of birth, next of kin, contact details
- Details and records about your treatment and care
- Blood test results and X-rays etc.
- We also keep information from people who care for you and know you well, such as health professionals and relatives

It is good practice for people in the NHS who provide your care to :

- Discuss and agree with you what they are going to record about you
- Show you what they have recorded about you, if you ask

We are required to store your information in identifiable form for as long as is necessary under special rules that are set out by NHS England; this is called NHS Records Management Code of Practice.

How we use your Information

The people who care for you use your information to create your health record and to:

- Be able to make good decisions about your health and treatment
- Make sure your care is safe and effective
- To enable you and other health care professionals to help make decisions about your care

We may need to use your records to:

- Look after the health of the general public
- Make sure that our services can meet patient needs in the future
- Prepare statistics on NHS performance and activity (where steps will be taken to ensure you cannot be identified)
- Investigate concerns, complaints or legal claims
- Help staff to review the care they provide to make sure it is of the highest standards
- Train and educate staff
- Approved research—You will always be asked to provide consent to take part in research
- Undertake medication reviews to ensure you receive the most appropriate, up to date and cost-effective treatment

Your Rights - National Data Opt Out

You have can choose to opt out of sharing your confidential patient information for research and planning . There may still be times when your confidential patient information is used, for example during an epidemic where there may be a risk to your health or the health of others. You can also still choose to consent to take part in research.

If you wish to opt out of sharing your information for research and planning, you can do this securely online at: www.nhs.uk/your-nhs-data-matters

You may also choose not to share your information with other health providers . Please contact your GP surgery to discuss how you can do this.

How we keep your records confidential

Everyone working for the NHS has a legal duty to keep information about you confidential.

We have a duty to

- Maintain full and accurate records of the care we provide to you
- Keep records about you confidential, secure and accurate
- Provide information in a format that is accessible to you (i.e., in large type if you are partially sighted).

We will not share information that identifies you for any reason, unless:

- you ask us to do so
- we ask, and you give us specific permission
- we must do this by law
- we have special permission for health or research purposes or
- we have special permission because the interests of the public are thought to be of greater importance than your confidentiality
